It was five minutes before noon. The mayor and the state superintendent had spent an hour talking to the pupils in an Ohio school and just before the stroke of the gong the chairman of the local school board was called upon to address them. "Young ladies and gentlemen," he said, pointing toward the window, "as you go out from school in about two minutes you will see a gang of men who are now shoveling cinders into a railroad train. They are earning $~~95~~ a month. Beside them is a timekeeper earning ~~$95.12~~ At the head of the train is an engineer getting $200 and over them all is a superintendent getting $~~1200~~. What is the difference between those men? Education. Get all you can of it."
